Grief and loss when someone dies

About this easy read booklet

This booklet is about grief and loss when someone dies.

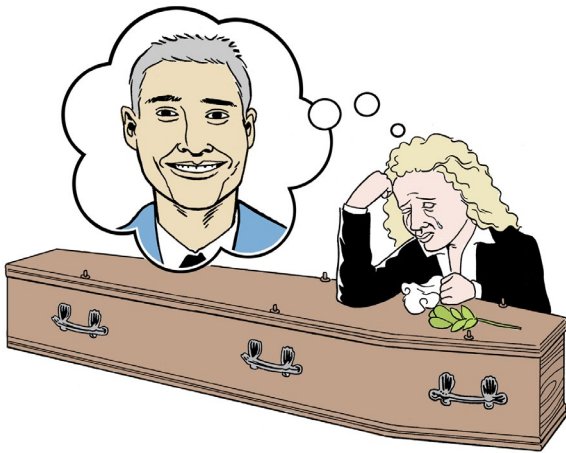

You can learn about how you may feel when someone dies.

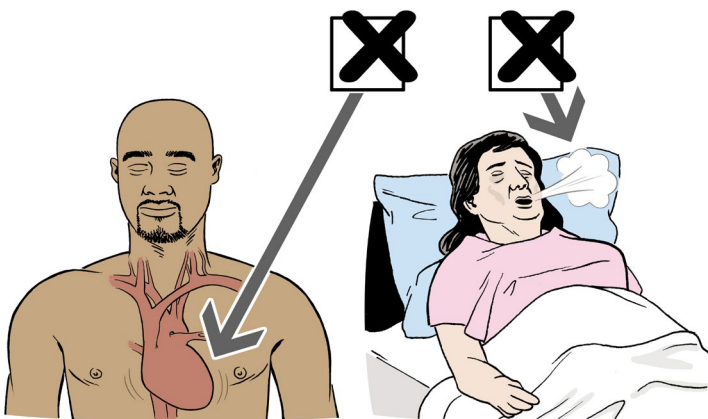

If you are worried about your health, you should talk to a doctor or nurse.

Grief and loss when someone dies

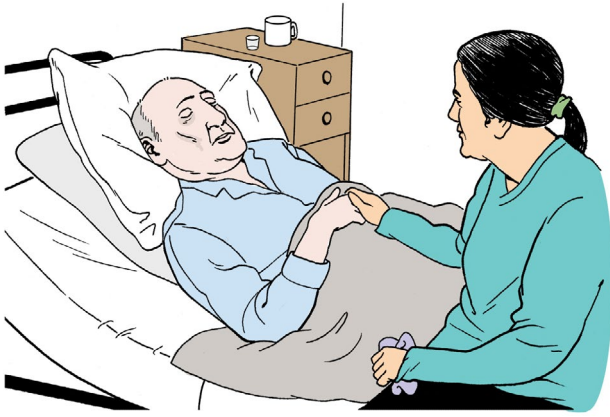

This booklet is to help you if someone you loved or were close to has died.

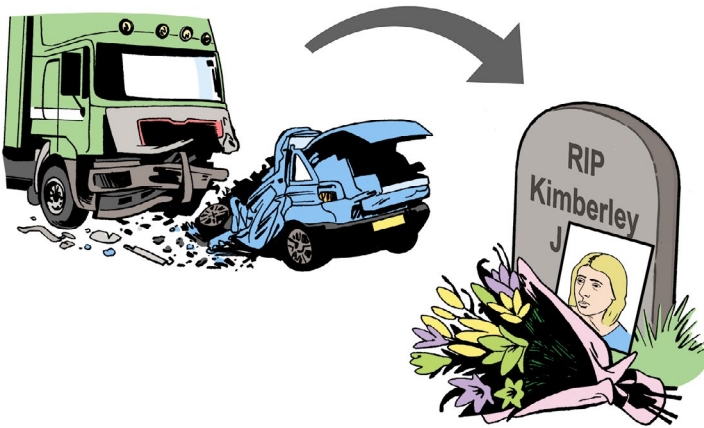

Dying is when someone's body stops working. Their heart stops and their breathing stops.

When someone has died they won't move or talk or do anything anymore.

People die for different reasons. Sometimes people die because they had an illness that the doctors couldn't make better.

Some people die because they have an accident.

Sometimes people die because they are old.

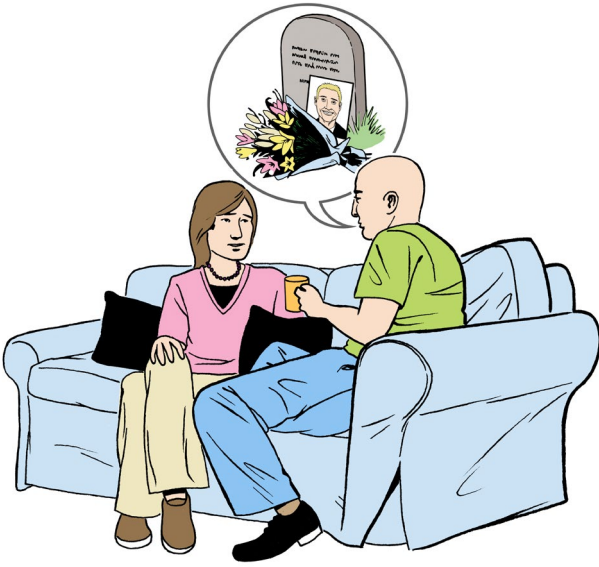

When someone dies it can be hard for the people who loved them. This is called grief.

Grief can make people feel lots of different feelings. It is OK to have lots of different feelings.

You may need support to help you with your feelings.

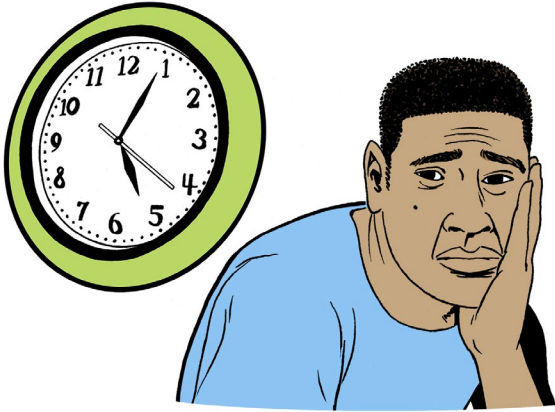

It is OK to talk about how you feel if you want to.

The person who is supporting you should be able to listen to you and answer any questions. They can help you with the different feelings you may have.

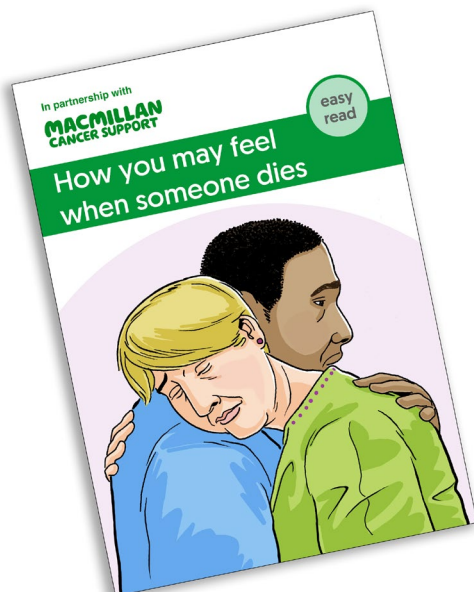

It is also OK if you do not want to talk about your feelings.

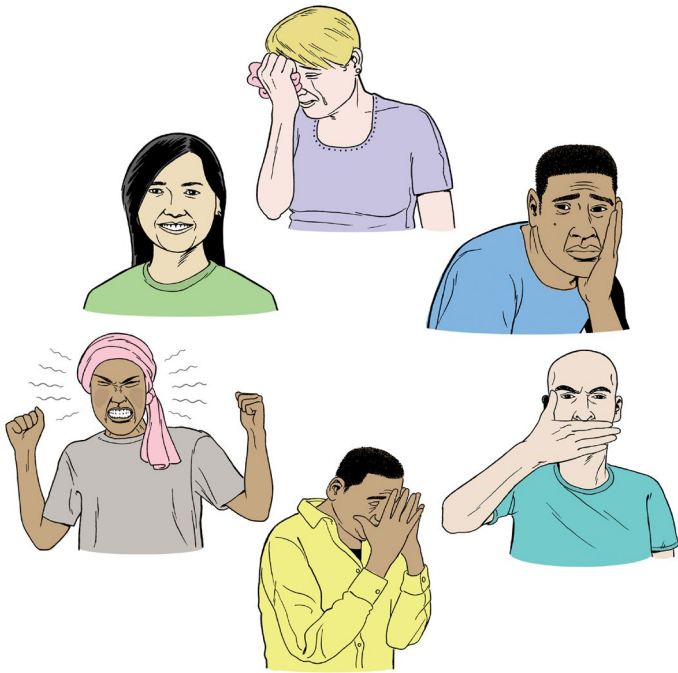

You may need some time to think about what has happened.

You can ask at any time for support or someone to talk to when you feel ready.

We have another booklet about how you may be feeling called How you may feel when someone dies (see page 14).

It tells you more about:

- the different feelings you may have when someone dies

- the different people who can help you.

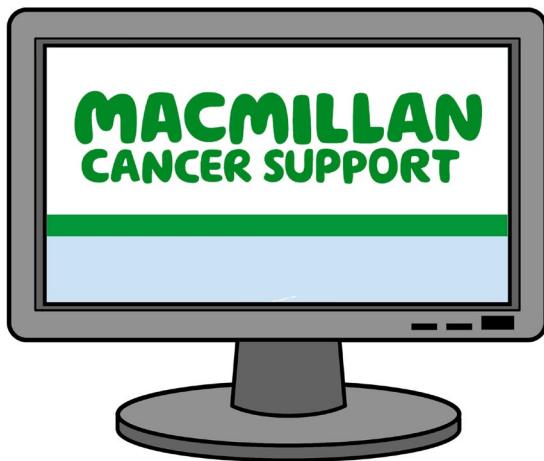

How Macmillan can help you
